

Death by Any Means

It began with the sickness and death of a Special Forces soldier in South America. Then a playboy in India fell sick with an illness that would kill him. It was the job of army doctor Mark Rawlins and his friend and supervisor, General Barton James, to find out why these men died. A worried American president frees up research money, labs are set up under the highest security protocols as more people die around the world. Rawlins and James slowly identify the lethal disease, but to their horror find a diabolical connection between Mad Cow disease in England, the Area 55 Biological Warfare Plant in Iraq, the Singh Pharmaceutical Company in India and a Mafia-backed distributor of Singh health foods and vitamins in Brooklyn, New York. As wives succumb to the illness and die, General James writes to the Surgeon General. Its no longer a worldwide problem to be solved by science. Now Rawlins and James are under the threat of Crime Syndicate control measures. So are their wives.
