Attempting the perfect murder, a killer encounters the perfect cop. After years of get-rich-quick schemes, Troy Pellinghams bank account is empty and his options are down to one: take a job in his uncles rare book shop, and spend his days working for an unpleasant man whose only redeeming quality is a mammoth bank account. Though well into his eighties, Uncle Rodney is the picture of good health, and the day when Troy will inherit the old mans money seems very far away. But then Troy gets a brilliant idea why shelve books for a living, when he can kill for a fortune?After the deed is done, a peculiarly shabby police detective comes to call. Lieutenant Columbo seems dimwitted, and Troy expects he will have no trouble putting him off the scent. But as the noose tightens around his neck, Troy realizes that no murder is too perfect for Columbo.
