

The CBS Radio Workshop, Volume 1: The Classic Radio Collection

The CBS Radio Workshop regularly featured the works of the worlds greatest writers, including Ray Bradbury, Archibald MacLeish, William Saroyan, Lord Dunsany, and Ambrose Bierce, among others. The radio series aired from January 27, 1956, through September 22, 1957, and was a revival of the prestigious Columbia Workshop from the 1930s and 1940s. Creator William Froug launched the series with this powerhouse two-part adaptation of Brave New World and booked author Aldous Huxley to narrate his famous novel. The Columbia Workshop radio drama was innovative in giving authors, directors, sound engineers, and composers many opportunities to experiment with the use of sound as a device for enhancing narrative. Columbia Workshop received a 1946 Peabody Award for Outstanding Entertainment in Drama. This eclectic collection of The CBS Radio Workshop shows includes the following episodes: The Storm by George Stuart, starring William Conrad (2/10/56); Season of Disbelief and Hail and Farewell by Ray Bradbury, starring John Dehner (2/17/56); An Interview with William Shakespeare, starring Hans Conried (2/24/56); Voice of the City, starring Clifton Fadiman (3/2/56); Report on ESP by Leonard St. Clair, starring John McIntire (3/9/56); Cops and Robbers by Stanley Niss, starring Larry Haines (3/16/56); The Legend of Jimmy Blue-Eyes, starring William Conrad (3/23/56); The Ex-Urbanites, starring Eric Sevareid (3/30/56); Speaking of Cinderella; or, If the Shoe Fits, starring Vincent Price (4/6/56); Jacobs Hands by Aldous Huxley, starring Hans Conried (4/13/56); Portrait of a Tycoon, starring Martin Weldon (4/20/56); and The Record Collectors by William Woodson, starring John Dehner (4/27/56).
