

Defiance: Second Part of the Flavius Josephus Journals (The Kahana Chronicles Book 4)

Having returned to Jerusalem after two years in Rome where he successfully secured the release of several priests that had been imprisoned for over a decade, Joseph ben Matthias returns to his routine of a normal life only to find that the events and circumstances of the previous couple of years are now coming to fruition and they will now not only haunt him but lead to the possible destruction of his world. From his encounters and liaisons within the upper echelons of Roman society, his close liaisons with the Empress Poppea, and the theft of military secrets as evidenced in Part 1: Deliverance, these now combine into a deadly threat that will bring about the deaths of everyone and everything he cherishes. Faced with the ultimate annihilation or enslavement of his people, Joseph must make the fateful decision as whether or not he will don the mantle of leadership that a fearful nation is attempting to thrust upon him, and in doing so, will he take them into the ultimate battle against the greatest empire history had ever known in a life and death struggle where only one will survive. This is the story of one mans rise to the pinnacles of power, as political and military leader, as general and lover to some of the most influential woman of his time, in a fight where everyone will lose, and from which the world will never be the same. A battle where the might of Rome will be threatened, the pillars that support the Empire will be shaken to their foundation and where the name of Flavius Josephus will be engraved in time forever. This is his story, this is his life, and for over two thousand years, the effect that one man had on the world, will never be forgotten.
