

Crossed Pathes

Henry Sayer, a New York City investor with an uncanny knack for making people money, had made it to the top of the financial game, maintaining his reputation of honesty and integrity. He was enjoying that life of celebrity and penthouse society until less scrupulous people decided to knock him from his pedestal. Suddenly he found himself scrounging for his very existence in the deep south, stripped of his envied status and reputation, even his clothes. Forced to live on the lam, hiding from everyone, his only hope was to make his way back home to collect the evidence that would prove his innocence and help him avoid a life of imprisonment. It's an uphill battle back to the top, but there's something in store for everyone who crosses his path.
