

Iris Malone, Child of the Sea, a Screenplay

Iris Malone shares life with eight brothers and sisters who compete with each other for their dysfunctional parents attention to their needs. Iris loves both parents who are in the throes of divorce at the very time she is entering her adolescence. With courage and ingenuity, she learns to use the means to her own independence. Even though very young, she dares to to choose her own way, ends up on her feet, albeit with her hands full as a teenage mother. She creates a life for herself as a manager and learns languages that open doors she had never dreamed were available to her. Always ready for a challenge, tenderhearted to a fault that could have held her captive in a destructive home environment, Iris finds love and respect from her family, friends and co-workers--and even manages to light a fire under her overly dependent mother who at last recognizes she, too, can make a life herself. Iris father suffers greatly before he discovers he can trust his family and finally confront a secret in his life that has nearly destroyed him and his relationship with his children.
