

The Law of International Finance

This new major practitioner text provides an analysis of the legal issues that arise in, and the commercial and regulatory background of, international financing transactions. The work opens with an overview of the various methods of raising international finance set in the context of the legal and regulatory issues. The author covers ways in which a creditor may be protected against default considering security, quasi-security and guarantees. There is also a discussion of the content and structure of a loan agreement, examining each part of such an agreement in the context of the relevant legal principles. A chapter on syndicated lending follows the discussion of the loan agreement, setting out important theoretical and legal issues relevant to cases involving multi-bank financing. A substantial section of the work is given to an explanation of the conflicts of laws issues which may arise in an international transaction. In this section important aspects such as dispute resolution and sovereign/state immunity are covered in detail. The work concludes with guidance on matters relevant to specific areas of finance such as projects, derivatives and bonds and, finally, a discussion of the purpose and methods of loan transfers and securitization.
