

A Petal in the Wind

May 1899: Luska, almost eight, lives with her pregnant Mama and disabled Papa in a shtetlone of the small villages that dot the Russian countryside. A clever and resourceful girl, she knows why everyone in her village worries about pogroms. But her parents teachings and whispered fears cant prepare Luska for the coming horror, when the Cossacks destroy her shtetl, and everything, and everyone in it. By luck she is spared, but left orphaned, alone and with only a bundle of old clothes. The memory of her parents helps her, and she finds her way to the city. But their memory cant truly protect her from deceit when Rabbi Hershel and Rebbetzin Naomi Zedek take her in. The grand Zedek home provides refuge, but no relief from Luskas nightmares, which disrupt the family. After she clashes with the couples eight-year-old son, Hershel makes it clear Luskas stay must be temporary. Blinded by sorrow, she seeks comfort from Naomi, unaware of the matriarchs plan for Luskas future, or the mystery behind the unoccupied childs room in which shes staying. When she uncovers the tragic secret behind the room and how it led to Naomis duplicity, Luska must find a way to move past tragedy and deception. Otherwise shell drift through life like a petal in the wind
