

The SEC and Climate: Disclosure Requirements

Climate change can impact companies in a variety of ways. For your corporate clients concerned about this issue, this pamphlet identifies the types of business risks posed by climate change and how these risks fit within the existing framework governing environmental disclosures in Security and Exchange Commission (SEC) filings and financial statements. Coverage also includes an examination of current practices regarding climate disclosures as well as the many private and public efforts to reform those practices. Finally, the pamphlet provides practitioners with suggested best practices going forward. The SEC and Climate: Disclosure Requirements eBook is just one title in the continuing series of LexisNexis Global Climate Change Special Pamphlets that collectively address the law of global climate change. The series, written by members of the American College of Environmental Lawyers (ACOEL) and other experts, provides complete and up-to-date legal analysis of federal and state climate change statutory and case law, economic analysis of emerging carbon markets, practice pointers, and when appropriate, checklists and forms.
