

Television Can Blow Me 4

The greatest TV writer of this or any other generation Gore Vidal is likely to have said upon reading Aerial Telly for the first time. Endorsements come no more emphatic. It is best to think of this, the fourth volume of Television Can Blow Me, as the collected reviews from the Aerial Telly website from November 2012 to August 2013. That's what it is, after all. Has it really been 10 years since Aerial Telly started his unforgiving reign of terror? Yes, yes it has. And still he keeps coming. While he regularly blitzes the cultural landscape with shock and awe his opponents stain the cultural landscape with cock and bore. 2013 saw a magnificent new redesign for Aerial Telly a jawdropping, radical, avant-garde aesthetic overhaul. It wasn't enough that Aerial Telly was already the best single person TV review website on the Internet by a country mile he wanted it to look the best as well. And now it does. Part man, part telly he's everything you would want in a television critic, everything you would want in a man. You can no more duplicate his style than Herim El Assmany can duplicate the performance of a professional footballer. Suck it up, suckers. There will be more where this came from.
