

Journeys of a Tortured Soul

Following the lives of a severely dysfunctional southern African-American family, Caesar Brunswicks debut novel focuses on the trials, struggles and triumphs of one Arthur Wilson. Victim to the repeated abuse of a psychologically challenged father, the young Wilson runs away from home in search of safe haven. Facing the realities of survival, Wilson finds himself engulfed in the dark recesses of Atlantas darker side. Arrested for prostitution, young Wilson is forced to return home to his fathers wrath. Dealing with the responsibilities of parenthood, an ailing mother and the challenges of academia, Wilson seeks nurture and direction from a self-appointed mentor, as he struggles to pull himself from the pitfalls of his troubled teen life. Brunswicks gritty tale details the high school and college careers of an African-American teen as he wrestles with his sexual identity, struggles with academics and fights to provide for his young son. The story, told in narrative flashback by the protagonist, begins with the youth boarding a commercial bus as he runs sway from home at the age of fifteen. The bus journeys, totaling eight in number, are used to tell segmented experiences encountered by the young man. Desperately seeking the affection he believes denied him by his family, Wilson has multiple experiences with both men and women throughout the story before coming to terms with his sexuality. Featuring thirteen original works of poetry by Nicole J. Niblack, Journeys masterfully addresses many of the elements of todays culture. Combining the tone of Niblack's classically patterned poetry with the issues of modern day America, Brunswick has produced a work of lasting impact truly worthy of global recognition. Incorporating the worlds of Music, Education, Family and Street-Life, there is something for everyone purged within the storyline. Journeys of a Tortured Soul is a new age Coming Out story.
