

The Human Being

Charles Darwin believed that human beings are mere containers, just another mammal with an exceptionally clever brain. But what if human beings are contents, a soul with a body, capable of various states of being? In this astonishing book, Nathan M. Shippee reveals that, if we are as we think, then our self-perception just might change the course of our evolution. In that case, we are Human Beings, ascending, not from the apes, but from within.
